

1

Jane has spent the morning gardening, and she takes a break and walks around the garden.

She notices a plant she doesn't know about in another garden bed.

The garden senses Jane staring intently at the plant and tells her additional information about the plant.

2

Jane and Steve are sharing a garden bed this year. They together are growing all the plants.

This month, Steve has been very busy now that his two sons are done with the school year. He hasn't been at the garden as much as he used to.

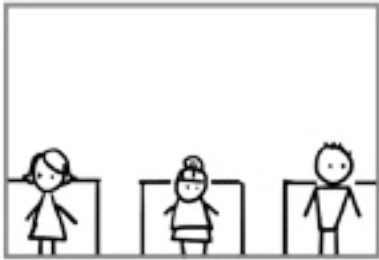

The garden senses the difference in time between Steve and Jane. The garden alerts Steve and Jane to this difference.

Steve and Jane have a conversation together. After the conversation each understands the other better.

3

At the start of the growing season, all the gardeners decide to hold a friendly competition amongst themselves to see who can grow the most produce.

As the summer progresses, Steve realizes that he's not making as much progress as the other gardeners

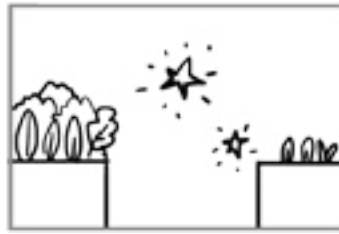

Seeing the difference, Steve works harder on his garden bed.

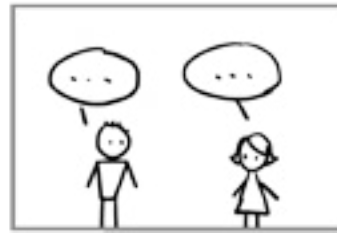

5

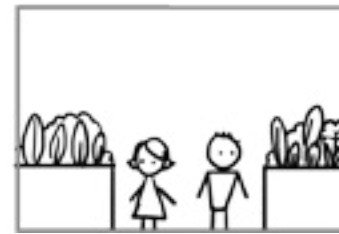

As the growing season progresses, Jane has filled up her plot, but Steve has only used half of his space.

The garden senses this difference of space usage and suggests Jane and Steve talk.

Jane and Steve talk, and Steve agrees to let Jane use a section of his garden bed.

Jane has more space, and Jane and Steve have had a chance to better get to know each other.

6

Sally walks by the garden and she decides to walk through it. She sees that some plants are running low on water.

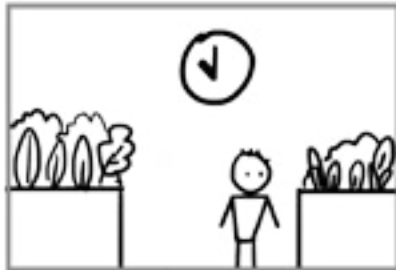

She helps water the plants that are in need of watering.

The garden thanks her for her help, and it gives her permission to take a tomato from a communal plot.

7

Steve comes to the garden every Saturday morning but leaves by 10am.

Jane comes to the garden every Saturday but arrives only at 4pm.

When Jane arrives, she can see who has been at the garden. She feels good that even though she is alone in the garden, other people have been there too.

8

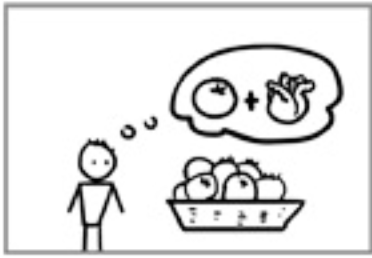

Steve comes to his garden bed for the week. He is alerted that the soil pH and the moisture make this a prime time for stink bugs.

Steve takes steps to stop the stink bugs before they arrive. Thankfully, Steve avoids an infestation.

9

Steve has harvested a big crop of tomatoes this week, and he would like to make a salad with the tomatoes. He needs lettuce though.

Steve sees that that Jane has been growing lettuce and has too much for her personal use.

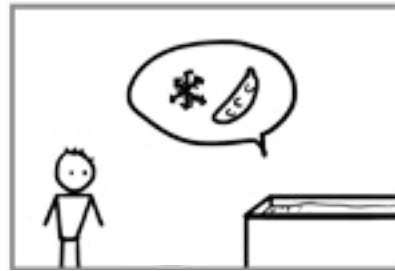

Steve goes to Jane's sharing box and drops in a few tomatoes and takes an extra head of lettuce. He now can make his salad.

10

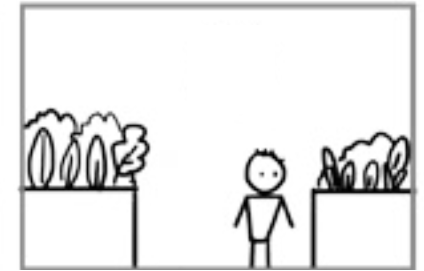

Steve is new to gardening, and he is not sure what to plant or how to tend a garden.

The garden bed gives Steve suggestions on what to plant. It remembers his plant choices.

As the season progresses, the garden offers Steve helpful hints on how his plants should be growing and how he should take care of them.

At the end of the season, Steve has successfully taken care of his garden and has learned more about gardening.

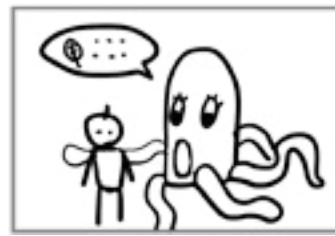

11

Jane has brought Johnny to the garden with her this morning. Johnny loves to run around and explore nature. He collects a number of leaves and sticks from the different garden beds.

He feeds the twigs to the octopus because the octopus is hungry.

The octopus thanks him for feeding her. Then she tells him what kind of plants Johnny just fed her. She asks if Johnny can find another type of plant and shows him a picture.